tial for coal-fired generating plants would create 184,000 jobs in coal mines by 1980, sponsors of the proposal said.

The Roosevelt commission's report, as it has been discussed so far, does not mention federal participation in creation of electrical power facilities. Nor does it set up any fund for development of other facilities such as the one proposed by the public power and labor groups. It does propose creation of a state-federal corporation with very limited powers.

John Whisman, Kentucky's representative on the commission, said last week that he and his colleagues had avoided putting anything in the Roosevelt report which might result in political friction.

The Roosevelt plan's failure to make specific proposals for power development, stream navigation or flood control has brought criticism this week from several Eastern Kentucky leaders.

Among them is Paul Hughes of Somerset, a businessman who is head of the East Lake Cumberland Area Development Council. Hughes said the Roosevelt plan is "tragically short of a total program" for development of East Kentucky.

"As I understand it, the proposal offers no specific plan to fully develop and utilize the resources of the area--such as coal, water, power and navigation. All these critical resources apparently are treated as secondary issues in the program, and seem to be sacrificed for political expediency," Hughes said.

He added that he doubts Congress will accept the Roosevelt program as "a far-reaching, sound plan to put eastern Kentucky back on its feet."

"I have no argument with the road, forest, vocational training and other proposals--as far as they go. But this is not a total concept which will provide for full and immediate development," Hughes said.

"Time is short, and East Kentuckians must now demand the leadership and the program they have needed so long to give them a real opportunity to catch up with the 20th Century," he added.

Representatives of several area development councils in Eastern Kentucky asked the Roosevelt commission for a program which would provide for comprehensive development of all resources when the commission held its first planning session in Prestonsburg last June. In September creation of a public power program was urged by council representatives in a meeting at Jackson.

None of the area councils has had an opportunity to see the Roosevelt commission report and members by and large know only what they have heard from Whisman at a series of meetings the past week. He has urged the councils to refrain from criticizing the Roosevelt plan.

The Roosevelt plan was to go to President Johnson earlier this week but if he has received it he has not commented on it publicly. Some Washington sources said parts of the plan were being rewritten to strengthen them, but Whisman indicated the proposals had already been submitted to several governors of states involved for their signatures and will not be revised. The President is understood to plan a special message to Congress on the problems of Appalachia.

Among strong supporters of proposals for a TVA-type development of the mountain area is Whitesburg Atty. Harry M. Caudill, whose book, "Night Comes to the Cumberlands," has helped to focus national attention on Eastern Kentucky and all of Appalachia.

The Mountain Eagle has urged creation of such a program editorially for the past several years and will continue to push for it, Editor Tom Gish said.

Gish said he does not believe Eastern Kentuckians will be satisfied with what he termed the "second-rate" program of development proposed so far by the Roosevelt commission.

School attendance up in state but down here

Average daily attendance in Kentucky's public schools increased in the state as a whole in the first two months of the current school year but declined in Letcher County, the State Department of Education said this week.

Department figures showed a growth of 1.8 per cent in average daily attendance over the state but a loss of 3.2 per cent in the Letcher County system and a loss of 3.9 per cent in the Jenkins Independent school system.

The Department said that for the first two months of the 1963-64 term, average daily attendance in the Letcher County school system was 6,729.1. For the same period in the 1962-63 term it was 6,950.5. The loss this year amounts to 221.4 pupils.

For the Jenkins system, the first two months of the current term show an ADA of 1,390.5, a loss of 56.6 pupils from last year's total of 1,447.1.

Other Eastern Kentucky counties showing a loss in average daily attendance included Breathitt, -2%; Jackson City, -4.5%; Carter, -7%; Elliott, -1.5%; Floyd, -3.3%; Harlan County, -3.6%; Lynch Independent, -11.3%; Jackson, -1.35%; Menifee, -2.8%; Martin, -5.1%; Pike, -1.5%; Powell, -.6%.

Five work projects okayed for county

One hundred fifteen Letcher County men will begin work on five local projects March 9 under the new program to aid fathers of dependent children.

The men will be paid by federal funds at the rate of $1 an hour for the work they do. The money they receive will come through the Kentucky Department of Economic Security, which is administering the program on behalf of the federal government. The program is part of President Johnson's emergency winter relief program for Eastern Kentucky.

County Judge James M. Caudill said J. Sneed Yager, supervisor of public works projects for the program, was here this week and approved five projects to begin

March 9. The five are:

County roads--work on a total of 36 county roads, to use 50 men.

Clean-up in the city of Jenkins, to use 15 men.

Cleanup in Whitesburg, to use 20 men.

Cleanup and repairs at county schools, to use 25 men.

Cleanup at Skyview recreation project near Haymond, five men. Representatives of the Haymond project told Yager they had been promised a state park by former Parks Commissioner Ed Fox. The land, which has been stripmined, was decided to the community by B. C. Greer of Greer-Ellison Coal Company after the coal had been removed.

Certification of men to work on the projects was speeded up this week after complaints that the winter would be over before the program got under way. Earle Powell, commissioner of economic security, said today that his department has approved some 700 men in the 11 counties eligible for the program and has about that many applications still pending. The program is designed to extend the aid to dependent children program to children of able-bodied fathers who could not qualify under the standard program.

Delays and red tape encountered by applicants for help under the program were criticized in a national telecast last week. Hugh Downs, commentator on the NBC "Today" show, read a list of things applicants must do and remarked that the process "sounds like a Gian-Carlo Menotti opera." Menotti is the composer of several modern operas built around elaborate dream and nightmare scenes.

TREE PLANTING TIME NEARLY HERE

Trees for spring planting may be ordered now through the ASC office, the Kentucky Division of Forestry or the Soil Conservation Service, Service Forester Ted R. Parton said today.

Landowners who want trees in time for spring planting should place their orders early so the Division of Forestry may supply the kind of trees requested, he said.

Early orders also give the division a chance to make deliveries during suitable planting weather, Parton added.

Trees available this year which are eligible for cost-sharing payments are the same as those in past years--white, shortleaf and loblolly pine; black locust and

In the nation's eye

More to come

Letcher County scenes are included in four major network television shows and also will appear in several books now in production.

Two of the TV shows have already appeared. One was part of a two-hour portrayal of poverty problems by the "Today" show on NBC Television last Friday morning.

Attys. Harry Caudill and Stanley Hogg and some other local residents appeared during the show.

The second was the second part of a "Twentieth Century" episode on CBS Television Sunday afternoon. Most of the show was filmed in Clay County, but Caudill appeared on this one also. The show contrasted depression in Eastern Kentucky with the boom it had pictured in Houston, Texas, the previous Sunday.

The "Today" show devoted its first hour to urban poverty and its second to rural poverty as shown by Appalachia.

This week a crew from ABC-Television has been in Letcher County, filming scenes which will be included in "1964," to be telecast Easter Sunday. The show is the final one in a series on the saga of Western man. Two previous shows in the same series have been the widely acclaimed "1492" and "1776." A third program in the series,

"1898," will be shown this week end.

Next week another crew from NBC-TV will arrive to begin research and filming of a segment of an hour-long documentary to be shown next fall.

A member of the English television crew which was here a few weeks ago wrote this week that the show had been transmitted in England "and seems to have been very successful--we have had quite a lot of letters about it." The British show will not be seen in America.

A novel concerning Eastern Kentucky, written by Frank Harvey, has been sold to the Bantam press and will be issued in June. Harvey spent several weeks in Letcher County just before Christmas.

Two other books about problems of the area also are in production. One is to be written by Philip M. Stern, author of a current book, "The Great Treasury Raid," concerning tax loopholes, which apparently is headed for the best-seller lists. Stern and a Washington, D. C., photographer, George de Vincent, spent several weeks in Letcher County last month. The second is being written by Tom Bethel, a young editor for Houghton-Mifflin Company, Boston publishers. Bethel spent a month here last summer, another month last fall and will return in March to spend several weeks in the area with a photographer.

Why should you buy U.S. Savings Bonds when there are so many other good investments?

To help your country is one answer—and a good one.

But Bonds have other advantages that make them worth your consideration.

For instance, they offer you just about the easiest way to save money: the Payroll Savings Plan. You just ask your employer to put part of your wages aside towards a Bond. Savings come automatically. Almost painlessly.

Another unique advantage of U. S. Savings Bonds is the way they stick with you. You can get your money any time. But if you're like most people, you'll hang onto your Savings Bonds for the big thing you want in your future.

And, of course, Bonds are a safe investment—as long as there's a United States of America.

Which brings us back to your country again. Bonds help defend freedom at a time when the enemies of freedom are stronger than ever.

Buy Savings Bonds. The banks and savings institutions that sell them don't charge you a penny for the service.

Important facts about U. S. Savings Bonds

Head for the hills!

The U. S. Department of Agriculture held a press conference in Washington this week to announce that it is going to continue to do business in the same old way in so far as its efforts to do anything to help the poverty-stricken of the nation are concerned.

The department appears to be determined to pile failure upon failure, almost as if it were afraid of success.

In essence, the department stated that it will follow the same programs and policies nationally that it has followed in Eastern Kentucky in its war on poverty.

This program, we are told, will be applied not only in the Appalachian area, but in the southern states from the Atlantic coast to Texas and Oklahoma, to the timber and iron-ore regions of the northern Lakes states, to the Spanish-American areas of the southwest, and to the Indian reservations and other scattered parts of the northwest.

And just what is this magical formula that has worked so well in Eastern Kentucky that it is to be a national model? Fred W. Ludwig Jr., writing in the Louisville Courier-Journal, tells us that it will include the commodity and food-stamp programs, grants and loans to homeowners to "winterize" their houses and special efforts to provide needy schoolchildren with lunches, and some kind of temporary work projects.

All of this is indeed familiar ground to Eastern Kentuckians. These programs have all been tried here. And school children still go without lunches, residents of shacks still live in shacks, and work projects still are unknown. The commodity program of course, has kept thousands of Eastern Kentuckians alive, but this has been the total contribution of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Recently, the Kentucky state administrator of the Farmers Home Administration, stated that employees of his agency were the "storm troopers" of the national "War on Poverty." If this is the program and these are the people who are to rescue Eastern Kentucky--and the poor all over America--then we had better surrender now.

You can't win a war, nor even fight a skirmish, without weapons. The USDA attack is nothing but another kind of welfare program which ignores completely the underlying causes of the war and the courses of battle which could bring victory.

Now they are to start treating the Indians just like they treat the Kentucky mountaineers. We do hope the Indians have abandoned scalping, or Secretary of Agriculture Freeman will stand in mortal peril.

Breathitt proposal would subsidize rape

Governor Edward T. Breathitt has told the Kentucky legislature that proposed regulation of the strip-mining industry in Eastern Kentucky can be relaxed somewhat because the unemployed of the area can be put to work through a welfare program reclaiming the spoil banks.

We admit that at first glance this sounds like a good idea--Eastern Kentucky has a big reclamation problem resulting from strip-mining, it has unemployed persons, and it has a welfare program? Why not put the three together?

Actually, we find much that is wrong and little that is right about the idea. In effect, the governor is saying to the coal industry: You won't have to do much reclamation; we will do it for you with tax dollars.

Further, the governor is proposing that hundreds of Eastern Kentuckians, who otherwise might be hired by the coal industry for reclamation work, be hired instead by the welfare program at a wage of only $1 an hour, a starvation wage in this inflated age.

The proposed strip-mine control bill mentioned by Governor Breathitt originally called for a flat $50 an acre fee, with proceeds to be placed in a fund to reclaim "orphan banks" left by past strip operators. Governor Breathitt, recalling that the state is embarking upon a make-work program for unemployed fathers, said that these welfare recipients could be put to work on the reclamation work and that the proposed $50 fee could be reduced to $25.

"We can do with this $6 million program a whole lot more than we can with this extra $25," said Breathitt.

This, however, would be absolutely nothing but a $6 million annual public, tax-paid subsidy, largely federally financed, for the strip coal industry. In effect, the state and Uncle Sam would be paying the coal operators for the rape they do in Eastern Kentucky. Further, a $6 million public reclamation program would amount to a subsidy of about $1 a ton for the strip coal operator in Eastern Kentucky.

It is the coal operator who is doing the rape, and it is the coal operator who should pay the doctor bill.

And what would this be doing to the coal miner? First, he loses his job because of unfair, tax-supported competition from the strip coal operator. Then, he learns that to exist he must accept a welfare job at $1 an hour, repairing the damage wrought by the beast which cost him his job and reduced him to poverty.

Governor Breathitt will be doing the people of Kentucky a grave injustice if he persists in this idea. Instead of trying to find ways to provide reclamation on that will be painless to the coal operators, he should think first of the people of Eastern Kentucky who continue to see their homes and farms devastated by strip operators, and he should not try to kid himself or Kentuckians generally into a belief that the damage can be repaired. It cannot be.

The only way to help Eastern Kentucky as it faces the monster of strip mining is to destroy the monster. To subsidize him with public funds will only increase his appetite and make more swift the total devastation facing the area.

Current Comment:

OUR FELLOW AMERICANS IN APPALACHIA NEED HELP--NOW!

Any McLean Countian who saw "Depressed Area, USA" Sunday afternoon and was not deeply moved is a heartless soul who has learned nothing of the Christian's concern for his fellow man.

Here were Kentuckians, twentieth century product of proud Anglo-Saxon blood. (No "inferior" race, this. No "mongrel" blood. No ignorant foreign element. Just pure, native-born Kentuckians.) Kentuckians unemployed because their jobs have been taken by machines and changing industry. Kentuckians dependent upon "welfare" because they cannot find jobs.

There is poverty here. You can see it in the pictures of the homes. You can see it in the faces of the people. You can hear it in their hopeless, resigned, puzzled words. You can find it in the cold, hard statistics. (One half of all families in Clay County have incomes of less than $1,800 PER FAMILY. And the families are large.)

Why? Perhaps Ayer, a teacher at Berea and one of the wisest students of Appalachia's peculiar problems, summed it up this way: The problem is: more people than we need to do what used to be done, less education than we need to function, and not knowing where to go from here.

There are "pockets of poverty" scattered over the nation. Some of the ugliest are in the slums of the big cities. Many are in poor farming areas of the West and South. But the largest and worst is Appalachia with its eight million people in the hills of Kentucky and nine other states.

It is those in Kentucky with whom we are primarily concerned. These are our own people. They are Kentuckians. They did not earn their fate. They just happen to have been born in a land that has little to sell but coal. And now--through no fault of theirs, unless it may be said that those who follow John L. Lewis may have speeded the process of mechanization and conversion to gas and oil--they have no jobs. Many of them are too strongly tied to their home valleys to want to leave. (Who among us can blame a man for loving the place of his birth--his home?)

And if they leave, where can they go? Where can a mountain man with a fourth or fifth grade education who knows nothing but mining and a little mountain farming go to find a home and a job?

This is our problem. The problem of all of us who are Kentuckians and who claim to be heirs of the Judeo-Christian heritage of brotherly love.

There appears to be no solution except massive government action.

This is a task that challenges the highest talents of the Johnson administration. Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. has shown a great interest in developing a program that will bring long-range solution to the Appalachian problems. Now, President Johnson has called the talents of Sargent Shriver to oversee the entire program to combat poverty. We have been told: "If you don't believe that Lyndon Johnson is sincere about fighting poverty, just wait and see."

We hope all Kentuckians--and especially our representatives in Congress--will give the effort their full support. In the name of humanity, we can do no less.

NOT MUCH TO SING ABOUT

All over the country popular singers are singing folk songs. But down in Appalachia, where many of these songs originated, there isn't much singing. There's not too much left to sing about.

--WALTER CRONKITE, on Twentieth Century's "Depressed Area, USA," telecast last Sunday.

POVERTY AND DISARMAMENT

Profits, wages and employment are all at record levels today, yet 4 million Americans are jobless and 30 million live in families whose incomes are less than $3,000 a year. At all levels of government--from the White House to City Hall--programs for combating poverty are being feverishly drafted, with next November well in mind.

No undertaking could be more deserving of total national commitment than aggressive war against urban and rural slums, against undereducation, against inadequate medical care and other manifestations of encrusted social neglect. The danger is that the campaign will degenerate too quickly into empty sloganeering and thus leave in greater despair than ever those whom it is supposed to help.

The conquest of poverty will be neither swift nor cheap. For the first year President Johnson says he hopes to make nearly a billion dollars in new money available for Federal anti-poverty programs. However, the indications are that the amount actually to be spent for the 1964-65 fiscal year will not exceed one-third that amount. This is perhaps as much as can be usefully applied at the start; but vastly larger appropriations will be necessary later if the assault is to attain the massive dimensions essential to chop away the root causes of dependency.

The nation's awareness of this need comes just as it has been found possible to make the first modest cuts in the billion-dollar-a-week military budget. What could be more appropriate than to establish now, as a matter of conscious national policy, a clear link between cutbacks in defense spending and increased investment in human welfare and community services?

Improved international understanding, plus the "overkill" capacity already possessed by both sides in the cold war, may in the foreseeable future permit dependable agreements for scaling down outlays for weapons. How quickly such cuts can be made with safety we do not yet know. But already the possibility that a development so beneficial to all peoples would upset the domestic economy has prompted President Johnson to appoint a special Cabinet committee on disarmament planning.

By a decision now that a large part of the funds released from defense will be earmarked for schools, housing, health and public works, the movement away from military war could be coupled with a movement forward in the war against poverty. By this example, a powerful spur would simultaneously be applied to other governments to make similar commitments for reallocation of their resources to peaceful programs. The campaign against poverty could eventually be turned into the worldwide undertaking it must be for true security and the abolition of want.

CORRESPONDENT FEARS HONEST TOILERS ARE BEING PUSHED ASIDE DURING PUBLICITY

By MABEL KISER
Where do we go from here?
We have been investigated, interrogated, "pictureated", paraded
and I guess by imagination liquidated, or whatever other action can be found in Webster's dictionary.

Simple people like me are very confused. When we see and hear all we have heard said about us
in recent weeks, we can't help but wonder if there is any place
any more for an honest, hard-working citizen. We used to read of the survival of the fittest, but now we wonder. It seems as if they are pushing aside those who are trying so hard to be self-supporting. It is true that we have our worthy needy,
and I thank God for a country that has a government humane enough to set up agencies like the welfare agency, but the common laborer
who is trying very hard by honest toil to support his family at least should receive an honorable mention.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bentley enjoyed cake and coffee with the C. B. Passes at their home Sunday afternoon.

Mr. William Newsome is doing fair after his recent serious illness.

Misses Karla and Kay Lark were the Friday night guests of Miss Rebecca Pass. The girls, along with Miss Gloria Cook, all went bowling.

Deserving a medal for his good deeds for his grandparents is Kris Bentley. Kris, a teenager, is always seen helping his grandparents, the Otho Bentleys, after school hours and on the week ends.

Mrs. C. B. Pass will go Tuesday to Bristol where she will meet her children, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Robinson, and their new baby whom she has never seen. The Robinsons have been in Alaska for the past several months. They will fly from Alaska and will spend thirty days with the Passes.

Blaine and I enjoyed Dinner
Sunday and a pleasant afternoon visit with Mr. and Mrs. John Cook, and their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Johnson and their children Mark and Martie. Mr. Johnson is a printer and works in Pikeville.

Others calling on the Cooks
were Mr. and Mrs. Bernette Hall

and their three children. Bernette, son of an old friend, is a technician at the former UMW hospital in Pikeville. They had lived in Ohio, and are glad to be back in Kentucky. This was the first time I had seen him
since he was a small boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Profit are home after visiting their children in Cleveland.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Meade drove to Hindman Sunday to see Mrs. Meade's father, Ezekiel
Bentley. He was doing fair. Mrs.
Meade's brother, Roy Bentley,
has gone to Connorsville, Indiana,
to the home of a son, Everett,
so that he may be near a doctor.
Roy has been quite ill.

Mrs. Maggie Mason is doing fair, but hasn't been out very much this winter. She hopes to visit her children in Cleveland
soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Walden Cuddy are home to stay. They are living in the house formerly occupied by Woodrow Stone.

PFC Dennis Martin called his parents, the Sherd Martins, from Germany, and said he is not as homesick now as he was at first.
The Martins' daughter, Mrs. Bob Reedy, Seymour, Ind., also telephoned.

Mrs. Ben Franklin still is feeling fine, and is planning some spring sewing. Dinner guests of the Franklins Sunday were Mrs.
Maryland Bates, Jonancy, Ky., and Mrs. Paul Hampton and children. Calling in the afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. Astor
Brown and family, and Mrs.
brown's aunt, Mrs. Delzia Collins, of Springfield, Ohio.

Mrs. Ed Tolliver taught school for Sherman Meade while he and the family were in North Carolina to see their sick son, Wendell.

The Ish Everidges tell us they have another granddaughter, Tammy Jo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burl Lucas of Indianapolis.
The Lucases also have two other children, Sandra and Michael.

Mrs. Ben Franklin tells us they had a letter from their granddaughter, Sara Ellen, and her husband, Oscar Yanez, who left recently for California. They arrived safely and Oscar is working.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Collier of Irvine were visiting his parents

the Dave Colliers Sunday with their two daughters, the youngest of whom the Colliers had never seen.

Mrs. Sherman Meade will remain in North Carolina with their son Wendell for some time.
W. D. Bentley is at work again and is doing fair. Mr. Bentley is suffering from a heart condition.

Because of bad weather the Holbrooks did not leave for Florida as they had planned. The roads were so bad they couldn't get to the Bristol airport. They will go later.

Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Ray, of Thornton, are caring for the old folks who were in their mother's care while Mrs. Addington is in the hospital. She is doing nicely
after surgery in Lexington.

Monoda Meade, daughter of the Jessie Meades, is in the Pikeville Methodist Hospital and is said to be quite ill.

I was glad to hear the sons of two Letcher Countians on the radio last week. Ronnie Fields,
son of the Herman Fields, Kings Creek, and Eddie Holbrook, son of Edwin Holbrook, Craft's colly, are both enrolled in vocational agriculture in Whitesburg High School under Varon Campbell,

and both belong to the Future Farmers of America.

We were sorry to learn that Mrs. Carl Kiser, Detroit, has been ill and off from work for several weeks. The Kiser's youngest son, Bennie Willis, will be home from Germany soon.

Steve Vense, Jr., Corbin, is visiting his grandparents, the Lawrence Kings, Pine Mountain.
Steve has sold his home and is moving to California where his mother, Mary King, lives.

John Morgan Mullins and Dempsy Mullins, both of Kingsport, enjoyed dinner Saturday with the Ballard Meades, Fleming, after attending the Hemphill Regular Baptist Church.

Mrs. Ballard Meade and Mrs.
Sarah Quillen visited their brother Nathan Wright and his wife
in Haymond Sunday afternoon.
Mr. Wright and his wife both are ill. Mrs. Wright is able to sit up some after suffering an injury
in a fall recently.

Mrs. Clely Meade, Deane, is in the Jenkins clinic for surgery.
She is the daughter of Mrs. Hil-

THE DEPENDABLES: SUCCESS CARS OF '64

Get something off your chest. Your knees, for instance!

Imagine, unwinding and relaxing in a compact. Now you can!
And that goes for backseat passengers as well as travelers up front. Because Dart is a compact in the large economy size. Lots of room for hips, heads, feet and knees. Family-size room all-round.

And what goes for Dart in the comfort compartment goes ditto in the performance department. Standard engine is the famous Slant 6 that'll outscat the extra-cost engines in most other compacts. For even more action, there's an optional new Dart V8 that takes no sass from any size car.

But don't let the comfort and sizzle fool you. Dart is a compact.
Witness its low price, easy upkeep, great gas mileage, and snappy parkability, and you'll know what we mean. If you're tired of cramped, underpowered compacts, talk to the man who can do something about it—your Dependable Dodge Dealer.

TREE PLANTING . . . (from Page 1)

yellow poplar. These trees also may be bought for cash.

Trees available for Christmas tree production are Scotch pine and eastern red cedar. Trees planted for Christmas trees are not eligible for cost-share payments and must be paid for at the time the order is placed.

Parten said trees should be set in open fields where there is little or no competition from existing trees and shrubs. If low quality trees and shrubs are present on a site where young seedlings are to be planted, then the landowner should apply for site
preparation at the time the tree order is placed. Site preparation includes the cutting of undesirable trees and shrubs and the chemical treatment applied to prevent their sprouting before new seedlings are planted. This practice when needed is eligible for cost share payments when carried out under the supervision of a forester.

Parten said areas that are to be planted should be protected from grazing, which is detrimental to young seedlings and saplings. Cost share is also available for the construction of a protective fence if it is constructed according to specifications and supervised by a designated forester, Parten said.

A NEW CONSTITUTION FOR KENTUCKY?

CONSTITUTION DRAFTING GROUP SWORN IN--State Court of Appeals Justice James B. Miliken (left) administered the oath of office to members of the Kentucky Constitution Revision Assembly meeting in Frankfort to draft a model constitution to be submitted later for the approval of Kentucky voters. The bi-partisan group, representing all sections of the state, met in the House of Representatives chamber in the Old Capitol at Frankfort, the same chamber in which the state's present constitution was drafted in 1890 and 1891.
